Sony Pictures officially made that teaser poster on your wall for next year's Spider-Man film a collector¿s item today. Out of respect for those affected by the events on September 11th, 2001, in New York City and Washington, D.C., Sony has asked that theaters return all copies of the teaser posters and trailers for the film: *"Due to the devastating events that took place yesterday and out of respect for those involved, Sony Pictures Entertainment is requesting that all Spider-Man teaser posters and trailers be taken down and returned to the studio."Our profound sympathy goes out to the friends and families of those who have lost loved ones in this tragedy."*The Spider-Man Hype! website has also removed all teaser images featuring the World Trade Center from its site. The trailer has been removed from the official site as well. An eBay search shows that prices for the teaser poster have risen dramatically since the attack yesterday. eBay has been removing many other World Trade Center items from their site, including one auction for the center itself from a tact-challenged user which bore the disclaimer, ¿some assembly required¿.While Raimi has claimed in print that the sequence presented in the teaser trailer was from the film, the trapping of a helicopter by Spidey¿s webbing between the twin towers of the World Trade Center did not appear in the shooting script this reporter read back on 7/21/2001. No word has come from Raimi about any shots that might feature the World Trade Center in the film.

Spider-Man is not the only production dealing with repercussions from the terrorist attacks. The Emmy Awards, scheduled for this weekend, have been postponed and most series in production have wrapped for the time being. Downtown Los Angeles has been closed off (as have most downtown areas in the U.S.) and film permits are being issued on an emergency basis only. Disney has pushed back the release of the film Big Trouble and Warner Brothers has followed suit with the Arnold Schwarzenegger action film, Collateral Damage.The FOX Network has pulled all of the promos for the upcoming Kiefer Sutherland series, 24. The pilot episode features a terrorist who manages to enter the US undetected by parachuting from an airliner which he then destroys to cover his tracks. The network has also replaced a scheduled airing of the X-Files movie on Friday with a repeat airing of 9 Months and a scheduled airing of Independence Day on Sunday with There¿s Something About Mary. ABC has followed suit by pulling Sunday's broadcast of The Peacemaker, another film that centers on a terrorist plot involving nuclear weapons.
